The research background is taken from the importance of agricultural activities which have been the main livelihood of the Sukapura people since ancient times which are still traditional in nature. Agricultural activities in Sukapura began to develop during the reign of Raden Tumenggung Anggadipa and this became a symbol that marked the progress of the agricultural sector in Sukapura district. The aim of this research is to determine the agricultural developments that occurred in Sukapura district during the reign of Raden Tumenggung Anggadipa. Researchers use historical research methods consisting of topic selection, heuristics, source criticism, interpretation, and historiography. The data sources used are primary sources and secondary sources using data analysis techniques, namely literature studies and interviews. The results of the research show that: (1) Raden Tumenggung Anggadipa was a descendent of Sukapura nobles who served as the third regent of Sukapura from 1674-1723 with the title Raden Tumenggung Wiradadaha III. (2) The life of the people of Sukapura district before 1677 was still in a traditional and free environment, the abundant natural resources were able to meet the people's living needs. Huma rice is a type of rice planted by people in the interior of the forest. The farming techniques and tools used by the Sukapura people in farming are still traditional. When the Company began to colonize the Priangan area, every region was obliged to hand over its crops to the VOC, including Sukapura district. (3) The impact of agricultural development is the establishment of kinship, the tradition of mutual cooperation between people in carrying out daily activities and the realization of people's welfare. The agricultural sector, which is the main source of livelihood, became the focus of the regent's attention at that time, so that a lot of agricultural land was opened and irrigation canals were built to make it easier for the people to carry out their daily activities.
