

ABSTRACT

This study presents the condition of Subaltern Identity Politics with the object of research into traditional martial ethnic groups facing the hegemony of two martial arts schools originating from abroad. The conditions faced by this traditional martial arts group were suppressed by the existence of these two martial arts from outside.

This research uses descriptive qualitative research methods with observation and interview methods. Data collection techniques in this study using purposive sampling. Data collection techniques using interview studies, observation, and documentation.

The results showed that these traditional martial arts groups were isolated from the social martial ecosystem in their area, then formed a separate social ecosystem consisting of small groups of martial arts to carry out activities that affect the existence of the art. martial arts.
