ABSTRACT

SITI LUTFITASARI HARTIANI ALWIYAH 2025. Development of Life skills Through a Hand bouquet Making Training (Study on Paket C learners at the Community Learning Center (SKB) in Tasikmalaya City). Department of Community Education. Faculty of Teacher Training and Education. Siliwangi University.

Some students do not develop enough life skills, therefore there needs to be an effort to develop life skills through a hand bouquet making training as a program that can increase the development of creativity, independence, sense of responsibility, communication, and the ability to work together in groups. This study aims to describe the development of life skills through a hand bouquet-making training for Paket C learners at the Community Learning Center (SKB) in Tasikmalaya City. The research employed a qualitative approach with a descriptive method. Data were collected through observation, interviews, and documentation. The results show that the training successfully developed various aspects of life skills, including personal skills (self-awareness and rational thinking), social skills (communication and teamwork), academic skills, as well as vocational skills (basic and specific). Furthermore, the training fostered an entrepreneurial spirit among learners by providing practical training, increasing motivation for entrepreneurship, and encouraging creativity and economic independence. Thus, the hand bouquet-making training has proven to be an effective means of empowering learners through skill development and entrepreneurial spirit based on local potential. The conclusion of this hand bouquet making training is that it can improve the development of creativity, independence, sense of responsibility, communication, and the ability to work together in groups.
